POLAR STAR.

"The sun has made a golden set,"
And nature sinks in calm repose,
The evening primrose's leaves now wet
And dewy, in the twilight glow.

In funeral gloom creation sleeps,
And seems to mourn of day, the close—
The dew of Heaven, the tears she weeps,
The altar where they fall, the Rose.

The dark'ning gloom soon fades away,
A stream of light on ether flows,
The pole star mocks the glare of day,
While in the north its brightness glows.

A joyful thrill, Oh! lambent Star,
Now thro' my bosom gently flows,
As I dream thy light afar,
And nature in thy splendour glows—

Surpassing far the feverish gleam
Of joy, we draw from woman's smile,
Whose glow as fitful as the beam
The moon sheds on a desert isle.

Serenely fair all nature glows
While on its breast the moon beams sleep,
But o'er her blackest clouds soon close,
And leaves the wretch to "wake and weep."

MAD POET.

SONG.

Written on the occasion of a late convivial meeting, and sung by a member.

To us—Hail to the Chief.

Hail to the hour when the goblet is flowing,
And the bright glance of pleasure illumines the eye,

When the heart 'tend to feeling with friendship is glowing,

And the pulse of delight in the bosom beats high;

Then let the joyous song,
Raid by the social throng,

Pour in sweet cadence its notes all around,
While thro' the mist of soul,

Warm tides of pleasure roll,
And joy, mirth, and music united abound!

The sun with his lustre illumines the morning,
Creation is blest when he smiles on the day—

And here pleasure's smile ev'ry face is adorning,
With a lustre as glowing and bright as his ray:

Here ev'ry bosom feels,
And ev'ry eye reveals

Unobscured the warm feelings of joy from the soul,
Joy in each bosom beats,

And ev'ry tongue repeats,
Friendship! we pledge thee this night in the bowl!

[For the Saturday Evening Post.]

Melancholy Anticipations.

I have thought, when the burden of this life is o'er,
And we are at rest in the grave,
How unfit then the ills that we now may deplore,
Or the pangs that our miseries gave.

How unenvied enjoyment, since 'tis but for a while
That we are allowed to enjoy—
And pleasure, tho' glowing and bright is her smile,
The sleep of the grave must destroy.

Tho' the light laugh of joy for a time may illumine,
With its lustre, the beam of our eye,
Its brightness ne'er reaches the depth of the tomb,
'Tis unheeded, unfit, when we die!

Tho' the loud tramp of fame with our deeds may resound,
And hallow our ashes when dead,
Unheard its report in that noiseless profound,
When the soul that inspir'd it is fled!

With the sweet tinge of beauty and health on our cheeks,
Cheer'd by hope—that can never depart,
And an eye that delightfully beaming bespeaks
The ardour and warmth of the heart—

In this fulness of life for a moment to pause,
And to think what ere long we must be,
When fate the dark curtain of death round us draws
And we bend us before her decree.

Oh! what then avail the pomp of this life,
Or its pleasures that quickly will fade—
A short time, and soon shall its passions and strife
With the silence of death be repaid!

But the halo of virtue for ever will last,
Its brightness ne'er fades away,
When the blaze that encircled our glories is past,
It will light us to realms of day!

[For the Saturday Evening Post.]

MOON LIGHT.

'Tis sweet beneath the Moon's pale beam,
By contemplation led,
To muse upon some pleasing theme,
Or joys forever fled.

It seems an hour of sacred peace,
When ev'ry passion's still,
Our thoughts from mundane cares released,
To enervate the will.

Her smiles benign on every part,
Diffuse a secret balm,
That strikes submission to the heart,
And makes each passion calm.

She seems to say, at dead of night,
When Somnus reigns around,
Adore thy great Creator's might,
And sing His love profound.

Then let us raise our Anthems high
For all the favours giv'n—
Let acclamations reach the sky,
Unto the God of Heav'n.

Moral and Religious.

In the vigour of youth and health, and whilst enjoying the blessings, and what are falsely called pleasures of this earthly tabernacle, this is the most acceptable time with the Lord for beginning the great work of Repentance. Perhaps you will say, that if you come even at the eleventh hour, you will be accepted, and receive your reward in the Kingdom of Heaven. True: but I would ask, do you know the number of your days. Has the Lord revealed to you the precise time in which you must bid farewell to all earthly objects? No, you will reply. Then perhaps it is with some of you the ninth, the tenth, and even the eleventh hour of your mortal career. Perhaps death stands waiting at your door, ready to receive the word and cut the brittle thread of life. Perhaps to-morrow, to-day, is your last. Sooner or later you must quit this earthly habitation for other mansions either of eternal happiness or certain misery.

"How, then, can you neglect so great salvation?" Deceive not yourselves. Say not to your soul, to-morrow will I begin to reform my vices, and be ready for a journey, should I suddenly be called to that "borne from whence no traveller returns." Perhaps you may not see to-morrow—Repent then every one of you; for now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation. On the contrary, if you neglect it, until laid low on the bed of sickness and death, until the time allotted you for Repentance is expired, it may then be of no avail; for the Lord might turn a deaf ear to your prayers. Again and again, then, I exhort you, in the language of our blessed Redeemer, if you value your future and eternal interest, "Repent, repent, for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand."

The Virtuous Man is a wonder.

That fire must be of an unusual composition that is made to burn in water, and so must his temper be that can remain unsullied, and retain its brightness, though encompassed with corruption's waves. When the handsomest courtesan, I headata, vaunted to Socrates how much she was to be esteemed before him, because she could gain many proselytes from him, but he none from her, he replied that it was no wonder, for she led them down the easy and descending road of vice, while he compelled them to the thorny and ascending path of virtue. Virtue dwells at the head of the river, to which we cannot get but by rowing against the current: he that walks through a large field hath only a narrow path to guide him right in the way; but on either side there is wide room to wander in—What latitude can bound a profane wit, or a lascivious fancy? The loose tongue hazards all, while the virtuous man sets a watch on his lips, and examines all his language ere it passes.

Every virtue hath two vices, that close her up in curious limits, and if she swerve ever so little, she steps into error—religion hath superstition and profaneness—fortitude, fear and rashness—liberality, avarice and prodigality—justice, rigour and partiality—and so in others; which has occasioned some to define virtue to be a medium between two extremes—Virtue is in truth a war, wherein a man must be a perpetual sentinel—'tis an obelisk, which, tho' founded on the earth, hath a spire which reaches to heaven—like the palm-tree, tho' it hath pleasant fruit it is hard to come at, for the stem is not easy to climb.

Though surrounded with difficulties, the virtuous man hath a star within, that guides and shoots its rays of comfort; he hath found the true philosopher's stone, that can unalloy the alloy of life, and by a certain process can turn all the brass of this world into gold.

Good Sense—He who wants good sense is unhappy in having learning; for he has thereby more ways of exposing himself.

[For the Saturday Evening Post.]

THE MISCELLANIST.

Promises which can never be complied with, and such as are calculated to raise expectations which cannot be realized, are highly imprudent, and indicative of a trivial mind.

That we should never promise more than we have ability to perform, is a maxim which cannot be too rigorously inculcated, and which it were well for us to observe, as on our standing among men, and even our private pecuniary interest particularly depend.

Under a just sense of the truth of the above remarks, the MISCELLANIST makes his introductory bow, and if every effort which he is capable of making, to please the taste of his readers, should prove unavailing, their frigid indifference, and disapprobating frown shall be succeeded by his valedictory exit.

It would appear by his title, that he intends to present his readers with a variety of subjects—and he assures them that the utmost care shall be exerted on his part, to select such as are both profitable and amusing, and carefully reject all that stand opposed to the promotion of virtue, and the inculcation of the principles of morality. The speculations of the sage Physiologist, the rigidity of the Moralist, the enthusiasm of the Panegyrist, the cheering smile of Illicity, and the solemnity of Religion, shall mark his desultory flight; but the unerring finger of virtue shall direct his course.

But above every thing that can engage his attention, the promulgation of virtuous and religious sentiments, and the exaltation of Piety, and the benevolent virtues, are the most momentous. To strengthen the golden bands of love and union, which are the stay and support of our social compact, to promote substantial happiness and lasting prosperity; and, in short, to secure the liberty and independence of our nation, are, in reality, to inspire the hearts of our countrymen, with the beatitude of virtue and her attributes, and to instil into their minds the glorious principles of Piety and Religion.

Were this the labour and ardent desire of every individual, how soon would those threatening clouds of corruption which darken our horizon, vanish as the dew before the morning sun, and give place to the joyous light of ineffable benignity, whose kindling irradiations would extend to the very zenith, and illuminate the whole of our moral and political hemisphere.

[For the Saturday Evening Post.]

THE OBSERVER—No. 2.

Intimately connected with the subjects of which I treated, in my first number, is the Press.

In the dark ages of Superstition and Ignorance, when Literature was as yet floating in chaos, and no such thing as a Press, or even the freedom of the Pen were disposed of, all mankind wore the appearance of heathenish stupidity; and the mind was doomed to travel this lower scene without one ray of Literature to illumine the passage. But to view the gradual approach of Literature, when its first beams pierced the gross clouds of ignorance, will ever afford amusement to a contemplative and rational mind. The veil was at length gradually and almost imperceptibly withdrawn, and the sun of Literature shed his dazzling rays on a once benighted land: at whose appearance Ignorance and Superstition fled again. But these rays are continually growing more and more resplendent, and the two preceding centuries, have contributed a greater lustre than will ever again happen. To what cause can this be attributed? Unquestionably to the means which were taken to disseminate knowledge.—The art of Printing will ever be looked upon as one of Heaven's greatest blessings; and the Liberty of the Press as essential to a free nation. Every freeman has an undoubted right to lay before the public what sentiments he pleases; to restrain this, is to destroy its liberty. But if he publishes what is improper, mischievous, or illegal, he must submit to the consequences of his own temerity. To subject the Press to the restrictive power of a licenser, (as the English nation once did) is to grant all freedom of sentiments to the prejudices of one man, and make him the arbitrary and infallible judge of all controverted points in Learning, Religion and Government. But to punish (as the law does at present) any dangerous or offensive writings, which on a fair and impartial trial shall be adjudged of a pernicious tendency, is necessary for the preservation of peace and good order of government and Religion, the only solid foundations of Civil Liberty. Thus the will of individuals is left free—the abuse of that free-will, is the object of legal punishment. This gives scope to the politician, to disseminate his principles among the people; which, if he was bereft of, might deprive them of forwarding the interests of the nation they otherwise would be led to perform. It is to this the Rhetorician owes his fame, acquired by the beauties of his compositions. In fine, if we should be bereft of thus communicating our sentiments to the world, all nations would have cause to lament—an universal relapse into barbarity and superstition would be the inevitable consequences.

We Americans may boast of enjoying, in all its purity, this freedom of the Press. It is chiefly to this we owe that rapid dissemination of learning which adorns our nation. May we continue to regard it as one of our invaluable privileges; a privilege which shall always be preserved, and which shall readily be defended as one of the bulwarks of Government, and as one of the essentials of a free and independent nation.

THE PEDLAR—No. 8.

The following beautiful lines appeared some time since, in one of the English Magazines.

Affliction, one day, as she hark'd to the roar
Of the struggling and stormy billow,
Drew a beautiful form on the sands of the shore
With the branch of a weeping willow.

Jupiter, pleased with the noble plan,
As he roam'd on the face of the ocean,
Breath'd it on the figure, and calling it man,
Endow'd it with life and with motion.

A creature so glorious, in mind and in frame,
So stamp'd with each parent's impression,
Between them a bone of contention became,
Each claiming the right of possession.

He is mine, said Affliction, I gave him his birth,
I alone am his cause of creation,
"The materials were furnish'd by me," answered Earth.

"I gave him," said Jove, "animation."
The Gods all assembled in solemn divan,
To consider each claimant's petition,
Pronounced a definite verdict on man,
And thus settled his fate's disposition—

"Let Affliction possess her own child till the woes
Of life, cease to harass and grieve it,
Let his body return to the earth whence it rose,
And his spirit to Jove who bestow'd it."

So fond of liberty is man, that to restrain him from any thing, however indifferent, is sufficient to make that thing an object of desire.—The following is related by Lord Kames as a corroborative fact. A sovereign, in travelling through his kingdom, was informed in one of its capital towns of a singular fact, that one of the inhabitants, a man seventy years old, had never been without the walls. The man was brought to the king, and being poor obtained a pension; but upon the condition that he should forfeit his pension if he ever set foot out of the town. But here even custom could not prevail over love of liberty: the man did not continue long at ease; his confinement became insupportable, and he lost his pension in six months.

MAGNANIMITY OF MARSHAL TURBENNE.

The inhabitants of a great town offered Marshal de Turbenne 100,000 crowns, upon condition that he should not march his troops their way. He answered them "as your town is not on the road I intend to march, I cannot accept the money you offer me."

Dr. FAUSTUS.

The first printed book on record, is the book of Psalms, by Faust and Schaeffer, his son in law, which was published on the 14th of August, 1457. Several works were printed many years before, but as the inventors wished to keep the secret to themselves they sold their first printed works as manuscripts. This gave rise to an adventure which brought calamity on Faust.—He began, in 1430, an edition of the Bible, which was finished in 1460; he carried several copies of it to Paris, and offering them for sale as manuscripts, he had the misfortune to be thrown into prison, on suspicion that he had dealt with the Devil; for the French could not otherwise conceive how so many books should so exactly agree in every letter and point, unless the Devil (who in those days of darkness, was thought to be always ready to appear, in prophetic persons, at every person's elbow, when called upon, and offer his services, and assistance. Faust, in order that he was not connected with the powers, and to obtain his liberty, was obliged to disclose the secret, and to ministers how the work had been done. It is upon this adventure that are dialogues which Faust, under the Dr. Faustus, holds with the Devil, travelling Puppetshows.

THE PIRATE.

(By the author of Waverley.)

This novel was announced some time in the London prints, but did not reach the country sooner than last week. The reputation it in Philadelphia, has been completely despatched rarely if ever equalled by any of the kind before. The PIRATE will be after with eagerness by every novel reader may be readily obtained at the book-stores give an extract contrasting the portraiture of the PIRATE, which is drawn with a taste and peculiar to the unknown author:

"From her mother, Minna inherited stately form and dark eyes, the raven and finely pencilled brows, which she was, on one side at least, a strict blood of Troil. Her cheek,

O call it fair, not pale!

was so slightly and delicately tinged the rose, that many thought the lily undue proportion in her complexion; that predominance of the paler flower was nothing sickly or languid; it was true, natural complexion of health, which responded in a peculiar degree, to the features which seemed calculated to exact contemplative and high-minded character. When Minna Troil heard a tale of oppression, it was then her blood rushed to her cheeks, and showed plainly how it beat, notwithstanding the general composure, composed, and retiring disposition which her countenance and demeanour seemed to exhibit. If strangers sometimes conceived that these fine features were clouded by melancholy, for which age and situation could scarce have occasion, they were soon satisfied, on further acquaintance, that the placid, quietude of her disposition, and the energy of a character which was but interested in ordinary and trivial occurrences, was the real cause of her gravity; most men, when they knew that her languid had no ground in real sorrow, was only the aspiration of a soul for more important objects than those by she was surrounded, might have wished whatever could add to her happiness could scarce have desired that grace she was, in her natural and unaffectedness, she should change that element for one more gay. In short, notwithstanding our wish to have avoided that neyed simile of an angel, we cannot saying, there was something in the beauty of her aspect, in the measure graceful ease of her motions, in the of her voice, and the serene purity of eye, that seemed as if Minna Troil belonged naturally to some higher and better world, and was only the chance visitant of a that was scarce worthy of her."

"The scarce less beautiful, equally and equally innocent Brenda, was of a complexion as differing from her sister, differed in character, taste, and expression. Her profuse locks were of that pale yellow which receives from the passing sun a tinge of gold, but darkens again as the ray has passed from it. Her eye, month, the beautiful row of teeth, which her innocent vivacity, were frequently closed; the fresh, yet not too bright of a healthy complexion, tinged a white, the drifted snow, spoke her genuine Scandinavian descent.

"Indeed the two lovely sisters were only the delight of their friends, but pride of those islands, where inhabitants a certain rank, were formed by the richness of their situation, and the general pitality of their habits, into one first community. A wandering poet and musician, who, after going through various fortunes, had returned to end his days in his native island, had celebrated the daughters of Magnus in a poem which he entitled Night and Day; and his description of Minna, might almost be thought to have anticipated, though only a rude outline, the exquisite lines of L. Byron:—

"She walks in beauty like the night
Of cloudless climes and starry skies;
And all that's best of dark and bright
Meet in that aspect and those eyes;
Thus mellow'd to that tender light,
Which Heaven to gaudy day denies."

SINGULAR.

There was, a few days ago, a gentleman reading in a town, who had been married 4 times, and by each marriage had 4 children; his first wife was 18, his second 28, his third 38, and his fourth 48. He was, on his first matrimonial trial, years of age, on his second 34, on his 44, and on his fourth 54. He is now in his last year of his life, and his last wife has been dead. This strange coincidence is lately to keep the 4th day in the 4th month of every year. He dies at 4 o'clock on the 4th day of the month, and is not reposing in the morning.

WINDS OF LIFE.
TO SHOW THE WEAK AGE AND BODY OF THE YOUNG, ITS FORM AND PRESSURE

Highway Robbery.—On Wednesday evening last, at nine o'clock, Mr. John Serah was attacked by three men, in Love lane, above Fifth street, who knocked him down and robbed him of his money, two coats, shoes and pantaloons, and then left him in a state from which his recovery is said to be doubtful.

Early on Tuesday morning, a fire broke out in a house in Budd street, near Poplar lane, which spread with such rapidity, that the building in which it originated, and three of the adjoining ones, were nearly destroyed.

On Tuesday evening, between nine and ten o'clock, Mr. George Sees, one of the Silent Watch of the city, was attacked in Thirteenth street, near Market, by two black men, who knocked him down, took his watch from him, and beat him on the head with it until he was deprived of his senses, and after having robbed him of his watch and money, left him in that situation. His recovery is said to be doubtful.

The others have not been heard of—persons are out in pursuit of them.

INDIAN WAR.
From the Arkansas Gazette.

We learn from the Indian country that the Cherokees and Osages have lately had some fighting, in which the former have been completely successful. The Cherokees were divided into parties, one of which, amounting to 50 or 60, fell in with a party of Osages (principally composed of old men, women and children,) and killed and took near the whole, and have brought in about 63 scalps and prisoners. One Osage woman, refusing to follow the Cherokees, was set on a horse and shot, and her body afterwards thrown on a fire and consumed.

Another body of the Cherokees, consisting of about 500 men, had not returned at our last accounts, but we learn that they had fell in with the Osages, and killed and took a much greater number. These successes had occasioned great rejoicings in the Cherokee nation, and the lives of a great number of the defenceless prisoners had been sacrificed, in a most barbarous manner, by their savage conquerors.

The Cherokees took a large quantity of skins, furs, and other property, from the Osages, a considerable portion of which was burnt, they being unable to bring it with them. Among the articles brought in were the hats, clothes, &c. known to have belonged to one or two white men who are supposed to have been murdered.

The Cherokees were so elated with these successes, that it was thought another war party would soon be sent out.

A letter to a gentleman in Washington, from Natchitoches states, that in the present state of inefficient government in the Mexican provinces on our South Western border, our frontier is much exposed, and furnishes facts in support of the statement.—The following is an extract from the letter:

"Natchitoches, Jan. 8, 1822.
Not long ago, five or six men were bringing a drove of horses and mules across the river Mexicano, (improperly called the Sabine,) a banditti were lying in wait for them, killed all the men who were conducting this drove, took possession of it, and drove it off. The jail in this town was lately burned, and several criminals made their escape into that country. Negroes are running away from their masters, and find an asylum there. An inhabitant of this place, who had been trading among some Indian tribes, and was bringing home a drove of horses and mules, had them all taken from him, by some people on the other side of the Sabine. The owner, got some assistance, returned, and got some of the drove again into his possession, was overtaken by the same party who had robbed him before, and was shot through the head. Another murder was lately committed on the Sabine. Fugitives from justice of every description flee into Texas, and are safe. Negroes and valuable merchandise are smuggled into this state by Galvestown traders, in quantities, almost daily. Six companies of the 8th United States regiment were lately ordered here from Florida, and have arrived in a very sickly state. Of the whole detachment, there are but few over one hundred effective men, and since they arrived, they are dying fast."

"I am informed the British government have many agents in Mexico, laying schemes of commerce, &c. for both the Indies."

A letter from a respectable source at Richmond states, that the Virginia Court of Appeals has decided that debts due to unchartered banks are not recoverable.—Of the precise extent of this decision we are not apprised. If this decision go the whole length of establishing the general rule, without qualification, the paper of these banks, now held by individuals, &c. to the amount of (it is supposed) two hundred thousand dollars, becomes as worthless as dried so many dead leaves of the forest. It is probable, however, that the decision only applies to debts contracted subsequent to the 1st November, 1816, or rather to the period fixed by a supplementary law, after which unincorporated banking institutions were outlawed by the statutes of Virginia.

Extract of a letter from Capt. Ramage, of the U. States' schooner Porpoise, to the naval officer commanding at Charleston, dated
"Off the North Coast of Cuba, 25th Jan. 1822."

"I have just time to tell you I shall be at Charleston in two or three weeks. I have taken and destroyed six piratical vessels, burnt two of their establishments, killed some of their people, and have now some prisoners on board. I also re-captured from them an American vessel, which had been in their possession three days. I have one of the schooners taken, acting as a tender, and find her of great service."

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.
Henry Johnson, a native of Copenhagen, Denmark, who has been several years in the employ of Force & Vail, at Rahway, New-Jersey, as a sawyer, was on the 9th inst. carrying a heavy piece of plank, when, stepping on some ice, he suddenly fell with his head, on a stick of timber, and the plank on his shoulder falling directly on the upper side of his head, mashed it in such a shocking manner that he languished about twenty four hours without any apparent sense, and died leaving a wife to lament his untimely end.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.
SELECTIONS FROM LATE ENGLISH PAPERS

The Cork Chronicle states, that the Carolina from Lima, arrived at that port, has brought $300,000, exclusive of several bars of silver, for account of Lord Cochrane.—A vessel arrived at Plymouth lately and landed a quantity of silver, estimated at 100,000, sterling, belonging to the same person.

The British Parliament met on the 3d of January, and was prorogued to the 5th of February.

The Cashier of the navy at Chatham, put a period to his existence on the 1st of January.

Another whole family named White-stone, five in number, has been murdered in Ireland: this atrocious deed was committed at Clareville on the 25th of December.

Accounts from Candia, to the 1st of December, announce, that the Greeks occupied all the open country in that quarter. The Turks were shut up in a few places, and were dying of hunger.

The Morning Chronicle of the 3d of January contains a letter from Zante, giving an account of the 5th defeat of the Pacha of Salonica, on the frontiers of the Isthmus. He, on this occasion, made a strong effort to retrieve his losses; but the Greeks rushed upon him with irresistible impetuosity, and his defeat was complete. Seven thousand Turkish troops were killed and taken.

The Persian invasion proceeds victoriously. The news of their successes, and those of the Greeks, causes bands of the assassins, among whom are many Janissaries and Asiatics, to run up and down the streets of Constantinople, and give themselves up to the most unheard-of atrocities. The Ministers of the Christian Powers begin to make preparations to facilitate the escape of their families in case of necessity. The nearer the crisis approaches, the more the fanaticism of the Turks increases; it has risen to a height of which it is impossible to form an idea.

The Austrian and Russian ambassadors at the Porte, have, it is said, urged the Grand Seignior to the unqualified acceptance of the Russian ultimatum, which he positively refused. He will neither assent to the restoration of the Greek church, nor to the occupation of Moldavia and Wallachia by Russian troops. There are so many rumours, however, set afloat by stock jobbers, that we hardly know what to believe.

The Correctional Tribunal of Marseille on the 11th of December, tried captain Quoniam, accused by the Public Prosecutor of having trafficked in negroes. He was condemned to the confiscation of his ship and cargo, and to the forfeiture of his occupation.

Dr. Kees, Counsellor of the Supreme Tribunal of Leipzig, who died there lately, was the richest individual in that city. His property is valued at three millions Saxo-crowns.

About fifteen years ago, a male child, wrapped in fine white linen, was laid down at the door of Dr. D—, in Sunderland. The Doctor, actuated by the purest feelings of humanity, had the little foundling taken care of, and has ever since cherished him as his own. About the middle of December, Dr. D—, received a letter from an officer in India, who after declaring himself the father of the boy, announced the fact of his having settled 5000l. upon him, and executed a deed of gift of 500l. in favour of the Doctor, for the great care which, he understood, he had taken of his son.

An event has recently occurred at Munich, which is the subject of general conversation there.—An infant of nine months having been left in a garden walk, an eagle lighted on it from a prodigious height; a servant who was working in an adjacent spot, happily perceived it, and running up enveloped the head of the eagle in his apron, while he had the strength and skill to hold it till some people, attracted by his cries, came to his assistance. The child received no wounds. As to the eagle, it has been placed in the royal menagerie at Munich.—Paris paper.

A steam engine of the immense power of one hundred and forty horses has lately been erected on his Grace the Duke of Portland's estate at Kirby, in the county of Nottingham, for the purpose of draining an extensive tract of coal. The cylinder of this stupendous machine is seventy inches in diameter, and the beam, which is twelve tons in weight, raises at every stroke fifteen tons of water, and when required, delivers at the surface from the depth of the mine which is one hundred and seventy yards, between seven and eight hundred gallons in each minute.

New-York, February 13.
We have had no less than 12 or 13 arrivals from Liverpool since the first of this month, besides valuable arrivals from other parts of Europe and the West Indies. We understand the duties secured at the Custom House the first six days of the month, exceeded a million of dollars, being a greater sum than ever accrued in the same period of time.

Buffalo, February 5.
On Thursday evening last, four criminals confined in the jail of this county made their escape. While the gaoler was removing them from an upper room, where they were during the day, for the benefit of fire, they assaulted, bound and gagged him, and after taking his gold watch, snuff-box, sword, pistols, &c. locked him into the dungeon, and made their escape. They have all been taken.

We are not addicted, from principles of respect to the Judiciary, nay indeed from sentiments of homage to the laws which we have our share in forming, to deprecate the decision of any court of justice, whether it be of a county—of a state, or of the admiralty tribunals of the Federal government; and we have heretofore, through our editorial existence has yet been short, united our admiration to others, of the strict rule of equity upon which adjudications have generally been made. We leave it to the lawyers and others of legal learning to discuss and to determine the wisdom, the justness, and the sound sense of the decrees of admiralty chambers, but we cannot, in publishing the following paragraph from the Evening Gazette of Boston, refrain from expressing a wide doubt of the propriety, or the soundness of the views which the honorable judge has taken of the case of the Mariana Flora.—It is true we have not seen the whole account of the testimony and examination, but though the commerce of the country is constantly interrupted with the most daring impunity, we see no reason why our gallant naval commanders should not be protected in protecting the national flag, and to resist an unjustifiable, unlawful, unpunished and insolent attack upon it, by a puny vessel of a puny nation.

We understand that the hon. Judge Davis, of the U. S. District Court, this day decreed, restitution to the owners of the Portuguese ship Mariana Flora, and cargo, sent into this port by the U. S. ship Albatross, and that he gave it as his opinion, that there was no cause of capture. Commissioners are to be appointed to award damages to the owners, for the capture and detention of the property, and the Judge also stated that he should take into consideration what damages to render the crew, for having been confined in irons, &c.

CONGRESS.

Mr. Russell, from the committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom was referred the message from the President, transmitting a report from the Secretary of State, on the case of Capt. Shain, of the Ajax, made a report, in the House of Representatives, on Tuesday last, detailing the circumstances of his suffering from personal violence, in the port of Havana, and concluded with the recommendation, that Congress take no further order thereon—which report was agreed to.

On Wednesday, in the Senate Mr. Dickerson from the Select Committee to which had been recommended the resolutions proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, relative to the election of electors of President and Vice President of the United States, &c. reported the same with amendments.

Mr. R. M. Johnson of Ky. introduced a bill which was passed to a second reading. It is intended to restrict the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, of the courts of the United States, to cases relating to the navigation of the high seas, and ports, havens, and creeks within the ebb and flow of the tide.

The claim of the Marquis de Maison Rouge was again under consideration. Mr. Smith of S. C. spoke against the validity of the claim.—Mr. Talbot moved to recommit the bill with instructions to report a bill providing for the adjudication of this and all other similar claims to lands in Louisiana.

In the House of Representatives, the Bankrupt bill being under consideration, Mr. Archer took the floor in favour of striking out the first section, and before he had concluded, the house came to an adjournment.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

The bill incorporating the Lehigh Navigation company, has received the signature of the Governor.

In the Senate of Pennsylvania, last week, Mr. Dickerson offered a resolution instructing the Judiciary committee to inquire into the expediency of reporting a bill, prohibiting the transportation of any slave or slaves, in chains, through this state or any part thereof.

The number of applications for divorce, have been so numerous before the Legislature of this state, that both houses have rejected bills sent from each other; one ground for this determination in the two bodies is, that Legislative interference is improper with subjects the recognition of which has been given to the Courts; another is that the easy access to the houses, such petitions, tend to increase their number, and to make formidable inroads into the happiness of families where private feuds might otherwise be rendered temporary.

Extract of a letter, dated Harrisburg, Feb. 13.

The House of Representatives of this state, have just agreed to refer the report of the governor with the correspondence accompanying the same, relative to the loan of a million, to the following committee, viz. Messrs. Sutherland, Lehman, Forward, Dimmick and Sterger. There was an attempt made to refer the subject to the committee of ways and means. Mr. Gilleland, the chairman of that committee, however, suggested the propriety of referring it to a special committee, which you will perceive was agreed to. The committee upon the retail bill, has met, but have not as yet been able to agree upon a bill to be reported to the house. The loan office bill is now before the committee of the whole is a subject of great moment.

MR. PHILIPPS.

Having terminated an engagement of six nights, during which his performances were attended by audiences, more numerous, fashionable and discriminating than have heretofore resorted to the theatre, Mr. Philipps makes his last appearance, and takes his Benefit on Monday evening. LOUIS ARMSTRONG, in the Opera of the Maid of the Mill, and Captain BELDARE, in Love Laughs at Locksmiths—are the characters which, on this occasion, he proposes to represent.

There can be no difficulty in ascertaining the cause which has produced such fortunate results, throughout the course of this gentleman's professional career. An unconquerable passion for the exercise of the musical art, induced him to adopt measures for the attainment of a musical education. His habit of perseverance, and the unusual quickness of his perception, facilitated his progress in the study of that pleasing and enchanting science. Nature having bestowed upon him with no illiberal hand an aptitude to comprehend, not only the formations of sound which she herself had designed, but the mathematical constructions of them, and the geometrical proportions and arrangements of their representative figures; his union of this persevering temper with this happy gift, has caused him to be the accomplished and profound scholar that he is.—The adepts in the science know this fact; the amateurs look at, and admire it, and the lovers of the profession feel the pleasing influence which it perceptibly disseminates. It is the effort, not necessary to urge the acknowledgment of it. We will only suggest that such rare and uncommon talents should be universally remembered and well rewarded.

In all Mr. Philipps's representations of the Opera, he has been most powerfully abetted by the fine talents of Mrs. BURKE, in accordance with whose voice, his own seems to acquire a richer sweetness, as the union of two expressive tones renders the melody more striking. We trust Mr. P. assisted by this lady, whom we have heard him call an admirable singer, (no mean praise from such a source,) will favour the citizens with a concert previous to his departure.

A report was made, at a meeting of citizens in Philadelphia, on the 8th inst. on the subject of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canals, to which the attention of the people of this state appears to have been of late commendably turned. The intelligent committee, by whom this report is made, estimate the amount expended on this object at about 122,000 dollars, and about 200,000 dollars more of the amount subscribed, it is supposed, may be obtained. The committee therefore suggest, that an additional subscription of 900,000 dollars (say in all 900,000 dollars) will complete the work.—They calculate the interest on this at 54,000 dollars, and the expense of annual repairs and attendance at 14,000—making 70,000. As for income, they say that it is supposed that 40,000 tons of goods are now annually transported across the Peninsula, and they calculated that, when the Susquehanna is made navigable the stock will be profitable.

FROM CURRACOA.

The brig Fanny, Captain Baker, arrived at New-York, from Curracoa, brought papers from that place as late as the 15th. of January, containing a Declaration of Independence of the people of St. Domingo.

Extract of a letter dated Bermuda Jan. 12th.

We have just received letters from our friends in Barbadoes, stating that the collector of that island, who is now in England, has written that a brisk negotiation was going on with the American Ambassador for the opening of the British ports to American vessels, under certain restrictions which he thought would take place."

On Monday evening, a cart stopped at a house in Ninth-street, near Walnut, with a load of goods. The driver carried a trunk into the house, when instantly a Negro jumped into the cart, and began to drive off. He was seen, an alarm was given, pursuit was made, and after having drove the cart about a square, the Negro leaped out and got clear off.—Dem. Press.

Royal Academy.—A few days since Mr. C. R. Leslie, a native of Philadelphia, so advantageously known to the British public by his tasteful pictures of Sir Roger de Coverly, May day Games, Anne Page, &c. and Mr. George Clint, whose pencil has so spiritedly portrayed many dramatic scenes, with portraits of distinguished performers, were elected associates of the Royal Academy.

HISTORICAL ANALOGY.—The history of England gives one King named JOHN, and no more.—The history of the United States gives one President named JOHN, and no more. The history of England gives two Kings named JAMES. The history of the United States gives two Presidents named JAMES. The history of England gives WILLIAM as successor of the second JAMES. We will not pursue the analogy, lest some persons should imagine that we were in favour of the Columbian nomination.—Charleston Courier.

Darien, (Georgia,) Jan. 31.

Five persons, who resided near Savannah, were unfortunately drowned on the 16th inst. while descending the river St. Mary's, having got too low down the sound, in consequence of the fog, their boat overturned.

On the same day, Mr. George Gibbs, surveyor of East Florida, accompanied by Mr. Kid, and three persons of colour, went out for the purpose of surveying Fort George Inlet, and on their return were all drowned, except Mr. Kid, the boat having capsized.

THE OPERA.—The Musical Science (denied that appellation by a very high and distinguished musician, with whom we conversed a few days since) has claimed, and very naturally too, more than usual attention since the re-appearance of Mr. Philipps.—It is gratifying to the friends and devotees of the Opera, that that gentleman is so admirably supported in his songs, cantatas, duets, &c. by one of the best orchestras which the country can produce. Mr. Lefolle, the leader of the band, has long sustained his reputation in that character; Mr. De Luce, whom we understand is also a very successful teacher of music, upon indiscriminate instruments, possesses powers of execution which seem to flow from intuition; Mr. J. C. Hommann, junr. is making rapid progress beyond the knowledge he has already attained, and Mr. Blondeau's flageolet keeps up its former well known and indisputable character. It is but a day since that we heard an European gentleman say, that few orchestras in the trans-Atlantic Theatres, of the same number of instruments, exceeded the talent contained in this.—Whilst other professional members of public institutions of amusement are kept before the public by reviews, we should like to see more notice taken of these.

From a London Paper, December 27.

ROYAL COBURG THEATRE.—Yesterday an immense crowd was attracted to the above Theatre to witness the various novelties announced for the evening, the chief of which was the Looking-glass Curtain, respecting which the expectation of the public had been previously raised very high. Some hundreds were in waiting at the Pit and Gallery doors before four o'clock, several of whom had been there so early as one, notwithstanding the heavy fall of rain, which continued during the day. At five o'clock the crowd was so great as to make it difficult for carriages to pass, and on the opening of the doors the rush was tremendous, but no accident occurred. The interval preceding the display of a curtain which was to reflect the whole of the audience, was passed with sensible impatience. It seemed as if the audience were afraid lest the promise should not be realised, and that they should suffer like the admirers of the Bottle Conjurer. At length, however, the critical moment arrived, the drop scene was slowly raised, and the magical mirror stood revealed in all its glory. The effect upon the house was difficult to describe, a sudden and deep silence for a few moments succeeded the most tumultuous noise, after which the din of applause which shook the house seemed to endanger the frail but splendid object which called it forth. The whole semicircle was reflected, and seemed like an opposing theatre in perspective; when the audience had gratified themselves with the coup d'œil, which was very fine, they began to examine it more minutely, and every individual was glad to recognise himself, and his fair one or friends; mutual salutations of course took place between the real persons and their apparent representatives, and such a novel interchange of civilities, afforded much amusement. On many of the holiday visitors it was evident that this display had an effect similar to enchantment, and they sat as still and mute as the crystalized audience at which they were gazing. When the drop scene again dispelled the illusion, the most rapturous applause followed, and continued for a long time. The machine, as it stands at present, is an immense mirror composed of separate oblong plates. These plates are each from thirty to thirty-six inches wide, and are about fifty inches in height; the whole surface of glass reaches from the floor of the stage to the proscenium, and resting upon a narrow line of plinth at the bottom, is bounded by a massy pillar, carved and gilded on each side.

Robbery Extraordinary.—John Fish, a cow keeper, residing on the New-Road, (says a London paper of Dec. 31.) applied a few days ago at the Police office, Hutton-garden, for a search warrant under the following circumstances. He stated that he had been robbed of 60*l.* in bank notes, which were deposited in a salt-sellar in the cupboard, together with forty shillings in silver, but that the latter was left, and he suspected they must have been taken by some lodgers. The warrant was granted, and two officers despatched to put it into execution; but previous to making the search, they went in to see where the money and notes were deposited, when it struck them that it was strange the money should be left, and after tearing down some of the wainscot, and stripping up some of the flooring, at the extreme end of the room, in a mouse's nest, they found one 10*l.* note much eaten, and the rest reduced to fragments to line the nest, so that neither name, date, nor number could be traced!

The city of Metz, it appears, has been some time afflicted by one of the plagues of Egypt, viz. frogs. Several streets were seen covered with these animals, and no one could imagine from whence they came, until a merchandise de Grenouilles (frog merchant) explained the mystery, by applying to the tribunals and claiming his property. He had shut up 60,000 frogs in the troughs and buckets of the fish markets, and several children, who discovered his depot, put every one at liberty. The frogs, delighted with freedom, spread themselves in every direction. They entered the houses, and the inhabitants could not relieve themselves from their visitors, without considerable trouble and difficulty.

REMARKABLE SAGACITY.

We do not think the records of instinct ever contained a more extraordinary instance than the one which we are about to relate, and for the truth whereof we pledge ourselves. A few days since, Mr. Joseph Lane, of Pascombe, in the parish of Ashelworth, in this county, on his return home, turned his horse into a field in which he had been accustomed to graze. A few days before this, the horse had been shod, all-fours, but unluckily had been pinched in the shoeing of one foot. In the morning Mr. Lane missed his horse, and caused an active search to be made in the vicinity, when the following singular circumstance transpired. The animal, as may be supposed, feeling lame, made his way out of the field by unhooking the gate with his mouth, and went straight to the farrier's shop, a distance of a mile and a half.—The farrier had no sooner opened his shed, than the horse, who had evidently been standing there some time, advanced to the forge and held up the ailing foot—the farrier instantly began to examine the hoof, discovered the injury, took off the shoe and replaced it more carefully—on which the horse immediately turned about and set off at a merry pace for his well known pasture. Whilst they chanced to pass by the forge, and on mentioning their supposed loss, the farrier replied, "Oh, he has been here and shod, and gone home again"—which, on their return, they found to be actually the case.—Cheltenham Chron.

WHOOING-COUGH.

It is not generally known, that, when a child has this troublesome and dangerous complaint, if the backbone, from the neck downwards, be rubbed with gattick, previously warmed by the fire, a cure is effected in a very short time; this treatment should be repeated for several days together. The skin may probably be rubbed off, but the child will experience no inconvenience from it.

DRAMATIC SUMMARY.

WALNUT STREET.—Mr. Philipps's present engagement terminates on Monday eve, with the two operas of The Maid of the Mill, and Love Laughs at Locksmiths, for his benefit.

PRINCE STREET.—The Child of the Desert, better known probably by the title of the Eschop, and the farce of The Tooth Ache, translated from the French by Mr. John May, constitute the entertainments for the benefit of Mr. Metastayer this evening. This gentleman's comic talents are of no inferior order, and there are a number of characters in which he has been quite as successful as comedians of more extensive celebrity. Mrs. Felby makes her appearance again upon this occasion in Zoe, a character which we have already seen her represent with much success, and of which we have before spoken.

HARRISBURG.—Forty Thieves, and the three act farce of Ways and Means, were the performances on Tuesday. On Thursday, the comedy of the Soldier's Daughter, and the Wings of Wonder.

WASHINGTON CITY.—Mrs. Richardson, who announces herself as late of the Philadelphia Theatre, gave a Concert on Thursday evening, at Capitol Hill, at which she proposed to dance Malane Parrott's Pas Seul and Hempage.

CINCINNATI.—On the 29th ult. Deaf and Dumb, and the Children of the Road, were performed for the benefit of Mrs. Jones. Mr. Henderson's benefit took place on the 4th inst. on which occasion he prepared for representation the play of Columbus, or the Discovery of America—which concluded with The Adopted Child. Mrs. BELINDA GROSSBORN, late of the Theatre, died on the 31st ult.

The second exhibition at the Circus, by Mr. Villalave's company of Equestrian riders, took place on Saturday, the 29th ult. Tickets of admission were sold for 50 cents in Spectre, otherwise they could not be obtained.

NEW-YORK.—On Thursday evening, the tragedy of Hamlet—Hamlet, by a young gentleman, being the last night but one of his engagement.—To which was added, for the second time in America, the farce of Mad or Wife, or the Deceiver. Deceased, as now performing at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, with great applause. Between the play and farce, a Scotch Pas de Deux, by the Misses Duranges.

Boston.—Monday last, was Mrs. Barnes's fifth night—the performances were Therese, or the Orphan of Geneva, the musical farce of Love Laughs at Locksmiths, with the admired prelude called Fire and Water.

Mr. Aragonne, the distinguished pupil of Talma, the French Tragedian, and whom we had the pleasure of repeatedly seeing at the Masonic Hall in this city, is now delivering lectures at Boston.—They say that his highest qualification is the purity of his pronunciation, and his ingenious illustration of the modes of speech in the French tongue. It may be remembered that during the time of this gentleman's recitations here, Mr. James Wallace, on his first visit to the U. States, proffered his assistance at them, to rescue him from the languishing state of patronage, the limited knowledge of the French language among us, caused him to encounter.

Mr. Matthews, of comic celebrity, has this week commenced a series of extraordinary performances at this place. It is stated that the first winter of his exhibition in London yielded 14,000—the second 8000—and the third 10,000 pounds—total 36,000—a fact, says the Evening Gazette, which appears almost incredible.

NEW ORLEANS.—Mr. James Brutus Booth personated Richard III. on the night of the 11th ult. Mr. Hughes, (formerly of Philadelphia,) as Duke of Buckingham, and Mr. T. Jefferson in the character of Richmond.

WALDREN B.

86 LOWLAND STREET, MANUFACTURER of Soap, Candles, and Hair Oil. Cakes, Custards, and other Confectionery. Soap, and Wash Balls. Glass Paper, &c. &c.

REVEREND

"There is a certain hospitable air,
Which opens to me with a smile—
The poor dog wags his tail—the servant runs,
And the cushion spreads the couch, and says
'No more, good Sir, I can say I'm weary.'"

HOSPITALITY.

"There is a certain hospitable air,
Which opens to me with a smile—
The poor dog wags his tail—the servant runs,
And the cushion spreads the couch, and says
'No more, good Sir, I can say I'm weary.'"

WEATHER GUESSES.

Before rain, swallows fly low; dogs grow sloopy and eat grass; waterfowl dive much;
fish will not bite; flies are more troublesome; toads crawl about; moles, ants, rats, bees, and many insects are very busy;
wine, sheep and cattle are uneasy, and soon so is the human body.

[To the above enumeration of signs the following might have been added. Cocks crow on the ground, tame geese gabble, goose run with bushes in their mouths, lights are blue, corn become troublesome, and broken bones ache.]

ENGLISH PROVERBS OF THE WEATHER.

If red the sun begins his face,
Expect that rain will fall apace.

The evening red, the morning gray,
Are sure signs of a fine fair day.

If gently breezes spread the heavenly way,
No rain be sure, disturbs the summer's day.

In the waning of the moon,
A cloudy moon—a fair afternoon.

When clouds appear like rocks and towers,
The earth's refreshed by frequent showers.

A gentleman coming into a coffee-room one stormy night, said, "he never saw such wind in his life." "Saw a wind," says another, "I never heard of such a thing as seeing a wind; pray what is it like?"
"Like," answered the gentleman, "like to have blown my hat off."

Mr. Walpole's taste in Gothic architecture and ornament, caused a number of applications to see his house at Strawberry-hill. Being, as he himself says, one day too cross, having been plagued all the week with staring crowds, he exclaimed, (it was then raining a deluge.) "Well! nobody will come to day." "The words were scarcely uttered, when the bell rang. A company desired to see the house. He replied, "tell them they cannot possibly see the house, but they are very welcome to walk in the garden."

Calumny.—Suppose that all should be spoken against you that malice can invent, let it pass as a mote in the sun. If you could check a report despite it; for if you endeavour to stop it the more rapidly
it will run.

APHORISM.—Love is very seldom produced at first sight—at least it must have,<
in that case, a very unjustifiable foundation.
True love is founded on esteem, in a correspondence of tastes and sentiments, and deals on the heart imperceptibly.

thanks for the patronage which has heretofore been bestowed upon him, and apprizes his friends and the public that his establishment has recently been improved, and augmented to an extent which the most immediate notice. His carriages are not only fitted up in an elegant manner, but constructed and furnished so as to be at once comfortable and convenient—his principal care having been to accommodate them to the several seasons of the year. In the selection of his coachmen he has been particularly careful, that they should be sober and skilful, and that their appearance should correspond with the equipage. Despatch, diligence and honour him with their commands. The dimensions
